Mokena Realtor Calls Concrete

Road Meeting, Organization Started, Committee to See Governor Small

Mokena has been talking concrete roads for a long time and when the Southwest highway was first thought of in Cook County it was hoped that a concrete road would be built on Wolf road to run thru Mokena and connect up with the Lincoln highway south of here, but nothing appeared to shape itself to bring this about.

Peter Michelsen, Mokena realtor, has been vitally interested in the matter for sometime and recently took the matter up with the Cook county board members and was told that if Mokena would organize a good roads organization and work to get the state to concrete Wolf road from its connecting point with the Southwest highway at the Will-Cook county line at Alpine, that the Cook county board would do all in their power to help the project go over. Mr. Michelsen secured a map showing the roads that Cook county will build, also showing the routing of the Southwest highway.

Monday morning Mr. Michelsen called a good roads meeting to be held the same evening at the Rock Island depot and about 50 good roads advocates were present.

Representative John Jenco of Joliet had been invited and was present. After discussing the matter, Rep. Jenco said he saw no reason why Mokena should not have a concrete road and said if an organization were formed and a committee named he would arrange to see Gov. Small and arrange for a meeting, so the committee could lay the situation before him.

Don C. Hall, Sr., appointed himself temporary chairman of the gathering and gave a pep talk resulting in the formation of a good roads organization. Ona E. McGovney, local real estate and insurance man who also is the first vice president of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce, was chosen as permanent chairman of the organization. Herman Schweser was elected as secretary. Mr. McGovney gave a brief talk showing what the business men of Mokena have been doing individually in trying to get a concrete highway thru Mokena.

A committee on resolutions consisting of Peter Michelsen, N. F. Heiman and Don C. Hall, Sr., was named. Next in order was the selection of a committee to meet with Governor Small in regard to the proposed concrete highway and the following were chosen on this committee: Fred C. Hinspeter, Emil D. Cappel, Elmer L. Cooper, Peter Michelsen and Ona E. McGovney. Rep. Jenco was to leave Tuesday for Springfield to arrange with the Governor to have the committee meet with him at Kankakee this coming Sunday. The committee will ask that Wolf road be made a concrete state highway from its connection with the Southwest highway thru Mokena south to and crossing the Lincoln highway and then connect up with the Kankakee concrete road at Andres. This will make a direct and short cut route to Chicago. Another meeting will be held at the Mokena school house next Monday night at 8 o'clock and every one in the community is asked to come out. Now let us boost with one accord for the concrete highway and we will get it.

The trouble in the past has been that a few individuals who had the idea they had political pull tried to work under cover and get things thru in secret, and not taking the community into their confidence and without organization their efforts as well intentioned as they may have been, naturally were fruitless. You must have co-operation if you hope to get anywhere.

St. John's Does

$13000 Business

During 1926

Excellent reports were given at the Annual Congregational business meeting of the St. John Evangelical church at Mokena held last Monday afternoon. All business transactions in 1926 involved over the $13,000 mark. There was still a balance in the treasury amounting to almost $700. Not only did the report show an increase in finances, but there was also a growth in the membership in all societies in the church as well in the membership of the church. The newly elected officers of St. John's for the ensuing year are: Louis Lauffer, I. D. Marti, and George Warming. The pastor W. J. Cramer was given a salary boost for his splendid work.

PRIZE MASQUERADE

The first prize masquerade of the 1927 season will be given by The Jolly Boys at Frankfort Hall on January 15th.

OAK LAWN STANDARD SCHOOL

Wiley Simmons, Principal

Our Christmas exercises held at the school on Thursday eve. Dec. 23rd was a great success.

Many Christmas carols were sung by the pupils and Mr. Simmons' pupils presented the play "Old Father Time and His Months". Florence Fisher and Dolores Johnson each gave an interesting little reading which was enjoyed by all.

The stage was beautifully decorated in red, green and white and the beautifully decorated Christmas tree, the old fashioned fire place various sizes of stockings hanging from the mantle and the colored footlights filled the room with every color and spirit of Christmas.

Shortly after the program ended, Old Santa Claus appeared in person much to the amazement and pleasure of the little folks. He brought presents and eats for all the children. Each pupil received a bag containing a half pound of candy, one third pound of nuts, one large Sunkist orange, a large delicious apple and also a present of some kind. The presents consisted of story books, necklaces, horns, harmonicas, dolls, games etc. and were furnished by the school board.

The room was packed but every one seemed to have enjoyed the entire exercise and went home happy.

We were sorry to lose three of our pupils Monday, Annie Ipema is moving to Oak Lawn, and Homer and Madeline Hoffman are moving into Hazel Green district.

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Luse spent the Xmas holidays at the home of Mrs. Luce's mother, at Coldwater, Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Rogers and baby daughter of Chicago visited Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Rogers New Year's Day.

Mrs. J. Patton and daughters, Mayme and Catherine of Gary, Ind. visited Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Rogers during the holidays.

Quart of Water Cleans Kidneys

Take a Little Salts if Your Back Hurts, or Bladder is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

The Difference

"Pa," began little Lester Livermore, "what is the difference between a wit and a humorist?"

"Well, my son," replied wise Mr. Livermore, "a wit says his witty things on the chautauqua platform and tries to get audiences to listen to him, and a humorist writes his down and endeavors to sell them." —Kansas City Star.

Why He Succeeded

Ignored politically and professionally, during his lifetime, Dr. R. V. Pierce, whose picture appears here, made a success few have equalled. His pure herbal remedies which have stood the test for many years are still among the "best sellers." Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a stomach alternative which makes the blood richer. It clears the skin, beautifies it, pimples and eruptions vanish quickly. This Discovery of Dr. Pierce's puts you in fine condition. All dealers have it in liquid or tablets.

HOME-SEWING TIME IS NEAR; GORGEOUS EVENING WRAPS

YES, the time has come to plan for spring sewing. Now that all the holiday decorations are packed away for another season, the "thank yous" all written, the children back at school, too early for golf, too late for grand opera, what to do but sew, sew, sew! Surely all signs are propitious for a January sewing bee.

House frocks to make, a supply of dresses for the kiddies, draperies for the windows—let's study up "what's new" in spring wash goods. Notebook handy? Might want to jot down a few items for reference.

For one thing, write as an opening notation that prints are outstanding

Evening wraps are reveling in a veritable orgy of gorgeousness. It seems as if elaborateness cannot be carried too far to please women of smart fashion. "Temperance in all things"—except the formal coat or cape, which may carry to excess color, fur and novelty handstitching without transgressing the law of fashion.

The wrappy coat which swathes the figure is perhaps the favorite. Often it introduces a draped treatment, after the manner of the model in this picture. Superb turquoise blue velvet is the chosen medium for this exquisite wrap. It is embroidered over the hips with silver spangles and stars over a for spring. Quaint chintz patterns and grandmother prints, printed satens, and especially printed batistes and dimities. "They say" small figures will predominate, especially on the heavier weaves, though peering into the far future one sees big-flowered organdies.

Fabrics on the order of pongee, also English cotton reps and Scotch madras are favored for washable daytime frocks, likewise rayon mixtures.

Competing with the new prints is broadcloth in a range of delectable plain colors. This is an ideal fabric for sports and simple daytime frocks, for it launders perfectly. There are rosy silver cloth. Of course it is smartly befurred, for most of the evening wraps are. In this instance luxurious silver gray fox is the preferred trimming.

There is spirited rivalry between velvet, brocade and metal cloth for the formal wrap. When velvet is used it is in some gloriously illuminative shade, lavishly furred, shirred, draped and embroidered.

As to metal brocade, it fairly effervesces with what might be called jewel colorings, for theirs is the red of the ruby, the yellow of the topaz, the green of the emerald, the purple of the amethyst reflected amid the also printed broadcloths to be had. These, with novelty rayons, show mostly small patternings.

As to styling, the trend is toward something clever and "different" from the some-time-ago popular bungalow apron effect. There is a decided favor expressed for short sleeves. Some of the newest spring models introduce the bolero—if not actually, at least simulating it. Pockets are made much of, following the inspiration, no doubt, of winter styles.

It is "pockets" which give to this dress of sateen print which you see in the picture a note of individuality.

glint of gold and silver weave. Quite often huge collars of shirred velvet usurp the place of furs on the gorgeous brocade wrap.

Charmers for young girls are semi-wrappy coats styled either of cloth-of-silver or cloth-of-gold. Collars and cuffs of white rabbit emphasize their youthfulness.

Recent arrivals from Paris embody many decorative ideas which give promise of a continuance of elaborateness throughout the styling of evening wraps.

Ridges Formed as the Earth Cooled

Although originally a molten mass our earth has gradually been cooling. During this process the crust hardened and then the next skin would solidify and shrink, and so on, the result being that the outside layers would tend to fall inwards, "wrinkling" into ridges—our earliest mountain ranges. Cracks, too, would be formed, through which there would be eruptions, and other mountains were made with the thrown-up lava.

The enormously high original mountains were gradually worn down by rain and weather, but as some of their stones would be harder than others, they would not wear evenly, and this again makes another cause for ridges. Rivers, too, would cut a way through soft earth, forming plains, but leaving the hard rock standing up as mountains.

Women and Birthdays

The custom of remembering the birthdays of prominent men is well established in the United States. Several dozen in the course of each year have the opportunity of announcing that they are spending the day "quietly at their desks." Some newspapers even have good old-time daily "birthday corners." The custom, however, has not generally been extended to the women. Many members of the "sex"—as it used to be called—take not at all kindly the reminder that another year has wafted them that much nearer to the "dangerous age"—or away from it. So recognition of the birthdays of prominent women may never become common.—Philadelphia Ledger.

6822 DEATHS FROM WHOOPING COUGH

Whooping cough is the most neglected of children's diseases, and one of the most dangerous. There are 6,822 deaths reported in a single year in the United States from this disease. There is no cure for whooping cough; it usually runs its course, but relief can be given and its duration shortened. A few drops of Dr. Drake's Glisco will relieve the most violent paroxysms of coughing, and given regularly it will lessen the severity of the attacks and bring quicker recovery. When Winter Comes Good Elimination Is Essential HABITS of life change with the changing seasons. Winter brings us more indoors; we are apt to get less fresh air and exercise, to eat heavier food and to be less active generally. These winter-time habits impose heavier burdens upon our hard-working kidneys.

Sluggish kidney function permits retention of poisonous waste in the blood and makes one an easier victim of winter's colds and chills. Presence of these unfiltered toxins makes itself felt in many unpleasant ways. One is apt to feel tired, achy and listless—to have drowsy headaches, dizziness and perhaps a dull, "toxic" backache. That the kidneys are not functioning as they should is often shown by scanty or burning secretions.

At such times the use of a stimulant diuretic* to the kidneys is indicated. Doan's Pills act on the kidneys only. Grateful users the country over recommend them. Ask your neighbor!

*Diuretics are agents which increase the secretion of the kidneys—Encyclopædia definition.

Insulated Attic Wife's New Storeroom

© Celotechnic Institute, Chicago, 1926.

OLD attics have always had a romantic glow about them. Here old wives are supposed to sentimentalize over time-yellowed wedding gloves and scuffed baby shoes. Here young girls on rainy days bedeck themselves in the crinolines and bodices of by-gone ages. And here—in fiction, at least—the long lost will is brought to light and the family fortunes revived in the nick of time.

But as a matter of actual fact, most attics are places of unbelievable discomfort and disorder. For one romantic attic it is safe to say there are a hundred which serve only as catchalls for dirt and disused articles which would be better thrown away outright.

Nevertheless, an attic is the logical place to store necessary articles, and with a little effort it may be made into an ideal storage room.

The first consideration is to keep the attic at a moderate temperature the year round. Extreme cold in winter will cause furniture to check all over; extreme heat will make things dry out and fall to pieces; damp will bring mildew and decay. Insulating the attic will avoid all these dangers and at the same time make the rooms below much more comfortable and effect a marked saving of fuel bills. Sixty per cent of all the heat in a house, engineers say, escapes through the roof. A large amount of this can be conserved by proper insulation.

A material which both insulates and serves as an interior finish is the cane fiber insulating lumber, which comes in large boards ready to be nailed directly under the rafters. Where the joists meet the rafters is the line of greatest heat leakage and this therefore is first sealed by carefully fitting in a strip of the insulating lumber on all sides. The rafters are next sealed, also side walls.

A layer of the insulating lumber put on the floor will afford additional insulation, allowing even less heat to filter up from below and so effect a corresponding saving in fuel bills. This will keep the attic somewhat cooler but unless it is to be used also as a workshop this does not matter.

Where there is no flooring already in place, the celotex is nailed to the floor joists and covered with a wood flooring; where there is already a sub-flooring, the insulating lumber may be applied over it and linoleum cemented on top of that.

The well-equipped storage room should have plenty of shelves and cupboards. A good supply of paper, string and marking tags should always be on hand. A working shelf, which may be hinged and hooked up to the ceiling when not in use, is a great help in sorting things or folding clothes.

With a little ingenuity, racks may be made to hold the screen and storm windows, like the ones used for extra table leaves. This prevents their being injured and simplifies getting out any particular one.

If electric light is in the house, an extension cord may be run up to the attic. It should be long enough to reach any part of the room, and hooks should be screwed in at various places ready to hang it on. If it is necessary to carry a lamp up to the attic, a few little shelves should be nailed up in different places where it can be placed without danger of knocking over.

The Road

EVERY one was glad when the new section of the road was built. All realized that personal visits could be made more easily, that trade would be brisker, that matters of general public interest would be carried on with more efficiency and dispatch.

The telephone road, that already enables every one to travel so easily, so cheaply and so far, is constantly being lengthened. Each year over 800,000 telephones are added to the Bell System. Every subscriber shares in the increased value given to telephone service by this extension which hourly is enlarging the scope of every one's activities by permitting an ever broadening interchange of ideas.

The LAMPS You Use Should "Fit" Your Lighting Circuit

THE question of "fit" in lamps is important. To insure 100% lighting value for your money, the lamp must be designed for the same voltage as the lighting circuit in your home.

For example, a lamp only half strong enough for your circuit, will burn out in forty minutes. A lamp twice as strong as your circuit requires might last many years but would give you only a fourth of the light you should have.

Special Note:

The recent reduction in electric rates and the use of efficient lamps permit you to enjoy better lighting without increasing your lighting budget.

The "Lamp Exchange Service" of this Company is maintained to furnish tested high-efficiency lamps, so that its customers may obtain the full benefit of your electric service.

A lamp display in our store shows conveniently the many sizes, shapes and colors available for your use. Call in and see it.

PRECEDING CHAPTERS

Harry Ormerod, long proscribed traitor to King George as a Stuart partisan, returning from France to London rescues Alderman Robert Juggins from a band of assassins. Juggins proves to be the grandson of a former steward of Ormerod's father, to whom Juggins feels himself indebted. Ormerod tells Juggins he has abandoned the Stuart cause. Juggins informs Ormerod of a Jacobite plot in the American colonies to weaken England by forwarding French interests. At its head is Andrew Murray, a Scotsman, and a Frenchman, De Veulle, deadly enemy of Ormerod. The two are in London furthering their schemes. Anticipating the plotters' early return to America, Juggins arranges for Ormerod to go there with letters to Governor Burnet, friend of Juggins, and work to foil Murray.

"Tis Juggins," interposed my master. "The lad is a cousin once removed. He goes to seek employment in the New world. To tell the truth, though strong and willing, he is not overburdened with wits. But he can swing an ax as well as anyone, and his muscles should bring him good hire on some wilderness farm."

"Aye," agreed Master Jenkins tonelessly.

In the street Juggins turned upon me indignantly.

"Would you ruin us, Master Harry?" he demanded. "Zooks, you were like to plunge yourself into trouble by your forward manner! I'll wager Jenkins is wondering now whether you are a criminal or only a half-wit. Why did you flare up over this De Veulle?"

"Because I know him and I hate him," I answered doggedly.

"Why? What hath he done?"

"He is one of the gallants of the court in Paris. He came out of Canada some three years ago, and made a reputation for gambling, fickleness and daredevilry of all kinds, but once in the Toison d'Or I heard him slur the poor young man I then served."

"James?"

"I called him King James in those days," I answered. "Yes, De Veulle was mocking the petty motley of our exiled court. 'What is this king but a puppet figure for us to dandle in England's face?' he said. 'And what are his courtiers but other puppets to dress the show?'"

"His toadies all laughed."

"And the most comical thing of all," ended De Veulle, "is to think of this puppet king, with a puppet court, ruling over a puppet England while France pulls the strings—as will surely happen some day."

"It was then I knocked him out of his chair."

Master Juggins gripped me by the hand with a warmth that surprised me.

"Good lad!" he exclaimed. "I would have done it myself!"

"What? You are no Jacobite?"

"I am no Jacobite," he replied in some confusion, "but no more were you a Jacobite when you struck him. 'Twas for England, Master Harry; and a man's country means more than any king that ever ruled. But what came after?"

"We fought in the upper room of the Toison d'Or—De Veulle and I and a friend of his and my friend. My friend was badly wounded."

"And you?"

"I disarmed him several times. When we began to fence I found he knew little of the small sword—remember, he had been brought up in Canada—and 'twould not have been pretty to slay a man so at my mercy. Also, to treat him as I did was more humiliating to his pride than death."

"You did well, Master Harry. But granny will be awaiting us. We must hasten."

He walked in silence until we had reached the house in Holborn.

"How comes De Veulle in London?" he asked suddenly as we climbed the stairs.

"He was in some trouble in Paris—what, I know not. The rumor was that he was ordered into exile. But if he sails for Canada, as Master Jenkins says—"

"And on the same ship with Murray," interposed Juggins excitedly, "after appearing in Murray's behalf this afternoon—"

"—then there may be more to his enterprise than the mere punishment of exile from the court," I concluded.

"Tis so!" exclaimed Juggins. "Beyond doubt 'tis so. And mayhap De Veulle will recognize you."

"Do you think my father's son will draw back on such excuse at this hour?" I said.

He laughed ruefully, and raised his hat for granny.

"Ho, Goody! Here are two hungry forest-runners will eat your kitchen bare."

Granny tripped into the hall, a mug of bitter ale in either hand.

"I heard what you said, and Master Harry's answer," she rebuked him. "Think shame on yourself, Robert, to hint that he would hesitate before peril—and you sending him into it, too," she added somewhat illogically, I thought. "Now, do both of you drain these. 'Twill wash the taste of the streets and taverns from your mouths."

We obeyed her.

"And what luck did you have?" she demanded next.

"He leaves us Saturday," said Juggins simply.

She cried out.

"So soon! Must it be, Robert? Sure, the lad should have some respite from toil and fear!"

"If he is to go, he must go then," rejoined Juggins. "'Twas because I felt as you did that I said what you heard, granny."

"And 'twas because he had a sound heart in him that he answered as he did," she snapped. "If he is to go, he should go, I dare say; and the greater the peril, the greater the reward. Have you done aught toward securing Master Harry's equipment?"

He went to the cupboard, from which he procured a bundle of rolled cloths. Layer after layer was unwound, and finally he drew from the wrappings a gun such as I had never seen before. It was long in the barrel, well-stocked, yet very light and handy.

"You may exclaim over it, Master Harry," remarked Juggins as he surrendered it into my admiring hands; "but you can have no idea of its value until you have seen it tested in the great forests, where a man's life depends upon the swiftness and accuracy with which he can shoot. I learned that in my own youth, and so when I returned to London I had this gun made for me by the king's own gunsmith, after plans I drew for him. There is none other like it."

"And it is for me?" I asked, delighted as a child with a new toy.

"What better use could it have?" he replied. "Oh, yes; and these go with it."

He brought from the same cupboard a shot-pouch of beaded deerskin and a powder-horn, ornamented with dull silver that would not catch the light. Also a belt of hide from which there hung in sheaths a delicately balanced hatchet and a long, broad-bladed knife.

"These you will discover no less useful than the gun," he explained, drawing the weapons from their coverings. "This which you call a hatchet is the tomahawk of the Indians, used for fighting at close quarters and for throwing. This other is the scalping knife, and a deadly blade it is, too. You will feel them strange at first, but among my friends in New York there is a Dutchman named Corlaer who will instruct you in the ways of the wilderness."

"You shall have letters to Governor Burnet himself, whom I met before he went overseas, and to Master Cadwalader Colden, the governor's surveyor general and a member of his council, a fine, loyal gentleman with whom I have had some correspondence."

CHAPTER III

The Fifth Passenger

Granny Juggins drew my face down to a level with her puckered old lips.

"God preserve you, Master Harry. No, I am not weeping. 'Tis—No matter. Remember always that so long as my heart beats there is room in it for you—and forget not that your mother would be hungry for pride in you if she were but with us."

She kissed me tenderly.

"I am an old woman, Master Harry," she said, "and I may not live to see it; but the day will come when you will be no longer a fugitive from justice. So be not disheartened."

"And how could I be disheartened," I demanded, as I set her down, "with two friends such as I may boast of?"

There was a mist before my eyes, and I was not sorry when Juggins broke in upon our farewells.

"Aye, John Waterman will be waiting us at the Temple stairs, and we have little time to spare if we are to get aboard before the other passengers. This De Veulle would recognize you, I fear, even in this disguise."

I could not forbear a grimace at the reference to my get-up, a linsey-woolsey shirt, with homespun jacket and breeches and a bobbed scratch-wig, the whole designed to give me a rustic appearance, which there can be no doubt that it did.

"Never mind, Master Harry," admonished Juggins as he clapped an ugly beaver of ancient style upon my head. "In New York you will rig yourself in forest-runner's garb, and forget that you ever played the bumpkin. Give granny a last kiss, and—"

She flew at me, light as a bird; her arms clasped momentarily about my neck; I felt her kiss on my cheek; and then she was gone from the room. I may as well say here that I never saw her again, although many a night as I lay under the stars I was to remember her quaint ways, her sweet, shrill voice and loving smile.

But I had no opportunity for such thoughts as Juggins and I hurried through the streets toward the river, where a wherry was awaiting us. All the way he kept up a running fire of last-minute advice and instructions.

"Guard well the letters I have given you, the one to Corlaer no less than those to Governor Burnet and Master Colden. Corlaer, though he be only a rude, unlettered woodsman, is none the less of importance in the wilderness country. He hath the confidence of the Indians of the Six Nations, a mighty tribe, or rather confederacy of tribes, Master Harry. I have writ as strongly as a man may to Governor Burnet, but I would have you say to him all that you can think of to urge him to a vigorous course. 'Tis no hour for half-way measures. We must crush Murray once and for all."

We came presently to Greenwich reach, and steered a passage through the river traffic to the side of the New Venture. Master Abbot, her captain, met us at the rail.

"The young man is not sure of himself afloat, and would seek his berth," said Master Juggins, after the preliminaries had been passed.

"As he pleases," agreed Captain Abbot indifferently. "The first aboard, lad, and may choose your quarters. You may bunk with the second mate or one of the other passengers. But no," he corrected himself; "I should have said with one of two of the other passengers. The lady hath a cabin to herself."

"The lady?" I exclaimed.

Master Juggins pursed his lips in a soundless whistle.

"So you carry a lady," he commented.

"Aye," replied Abbot.

"Who is she?"

"I know not."

He turned to me.

"And now, young sir, what do you say? Will it be the second mate or a passenger for company?"

"The second mate," I said.

He nodded his head, called a seaman to carry my luggage below and point the way, and walked off.

Master Juggins drew me back to the rail.

"Tis best I should not wait," he said. "Stay below till you be safe out of Thames mouth, Master Harry. You should be safe enough now, but care is a sure precaution."

"I will not forget," I promised.

"And one thing more, lad. Do not stint your wants for money. Governor Burnet will aid you to draw whatever you may desire through the bankers in New York. Remember, you spend on my behalf. I would willingly use all I have to thwart Murray. When all is said and done, we are at war with France. 'Tis no war of generals and armies and admirals and fleets, I grant you. But war it is."

He snote the rail with his hand by way of emphasis.

"What kind of war?" I asked.

Fate has arranged a meeting for Ormerod which, though he does not at once recognize it, is to be of momentous importance in his life.

States' Lines Marked by Mason and Dixon

Mason and Dixon's line is the boundary between the states of Pennsylvania and Maryland, from the Delaware border to that of West Virginia. After years of dispute between the proprietors of the Pennsylvania and Maryland colonies, a boundary compromise was arrived at in 1769 and two English surveyors, Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, were appointed to run the line. This they began in 1763, working westward for four years, by which time they carried their survey over the mountains to a point 244 miles from the Delaware river. Indian hostility made further work impossible at the time, and the line was completed later by others. The whole route was marked by milestones, every fifth one bearing on one side the arms of Lord Baltimore and on the other those of William Penn. The exact latitude of the line is 39 degrees 43 minutes 28.3 seconds north.

In the days of the slavery question Mason and Dixon's line was often popularly projected westward, the name being given to the boundary between free and slave territory.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Christ Requires of Us.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ's Life and Example for Us.

The context (v. 26) clearly implies what is elsewhere positively declared (John 15:18-21; Luke 21:17) that the followers of Christ will be hated and opposed. In this lesson Christ sets forth the principles governing the life of his followers.

I. "Love Your Enemies" (v. 27).

Love here is not a natural affection. To love friends is easy, but to love enemies is only possible to those who have been made partakers of the divine nature—been born again.

II. "Do Good to Them Which Hate You" (v. 27).

Love is positive in its nature. The true Christian will not merely refrain from doing injury to one who hates him, but will be concerned with and engaged in doing good to him. True love acts according to its own essential nature.

III. "Bless Them That Curse You" (v. 28).

To bless means to speak well of—to invoke a blessing upon. Injury by words is hard to let go unchallenged. The one who is a child of God and allows the Spirit of his Maker and Redeemer to express itself through him will return blessings for cursings.

IV. "Pray for Them Which Despitefully Use You" (v. 28).

We should pray for those who abuse us. The best commentary on this precept is Christ's own example (Luke 23:34). "Father forgive them for they know not what they do."

When Christ was reviled He reviled not again. When He suffered, He threatened not, but committed Himself to Him that judgeth righteously. (1 Pet. 2:23).

V. "Patiently Endure Wrong and Injury" (v. 29).

The Christian is not to bristle in defense of his rights but rather to suffer insult, injury and even loss. This expresses the law which should govern the individual's actions, but should not be pressed so far that evil-doers can go unchecked. Rightly constituted government has been ordained of God for the protection of the innocent and the punishment of evildoers (Rom. 13:1-8).

VI. Give to Every One That Asketh of Thee (v. 30).

God is the supreme example. He gives freely and generously but intelligently. This text does not authorize indiscriminate giving. There is a giving which injures the one to whom the gift is made. To give a man money to buy whisky would be wrong.

VII. Do as You Wish to Be Done By (v. 31).

This is called the Golden Rule. It is the sum total of Christian duty as it pertains to human interrelations. Human beings carry with them the consciousness which is the touchstone which teaches them their duty to others. If men were to live up to this rule the problem of capital and labor would be solved and end would be put to war. International relations would be peaceably adjusted and all profiteering in business would end. Practicing this precept proves that we are children of God. Loving those who love us, doing good to those who do good to us, lending to those who lend to us, is the common practice even among sinners. No new birth, no Holy Spirit needed to live this kind of life.

VIII. Be Merciful (v. 36).

This means to be filled with pity and compassion. To enter into sympathy with every need of others. The supreme example as to this is the Heavenly Father.

IX. Censorious Judgments Condemned (v. 27).

This means that we should not seek out the evil or faults in others for our satisfaction. We should not sit in censorious judgment upon the actions of others. However, it does not prohibit the just estimation of the character of others by their deeds.

X. The Compensations of Right Living (v. 38).

The one who gives freely of money, loves sincerely, makes the Golden Rule the standard of his life, shows mercy and kindness to others, and refrains from impugning the motives of others will be fully rewarded in kind. God will see to it that there be no loss.

Every Inch a Real Home Is This Colonial Type

A LIVING-ROOM forty feet long—that is practically what one has in this exceptionally well planned Colonial house. The living-room extends on one side into the dining-room, set off only by two small china closets, and on the other into the sunroom. The whole effect is one of spaciousness and hospitality.

Another outstanding feature is the downstairs bed-room, which can be used as sick-room, guest chamber, playroom or sewing room, as occasion arises. The stairways are compactly arranged and well out of sight. There are closets and storage space enough to please the most acquisitive housekeeper.

White, cream or grey paint may be used on the siding with shutters, trim and roof in harmonizing colors. The walls and roof are made to resist heat and cold by insulating with celotex. The cost of building may be kept down by excavating only half of the house, taking care to insulate the unexcavated half with a layer of celotex in order to heat the house easily in the coldest weather. A further saving may be effected by finishing off the walls of the second floor rooms with celotex instead of lath and plaster. Left either plain painted, stained or finished with a dainty stencil such walls are extremely effective and durable.

THE NEWS

TINLEY PARK

Remember the big date is next Saturday night, Jan. 15th when the Triangle A. C. give their first hop at the Saenger Hall. Music by J. Vail's nickname orchestra. Come and have a big time.

The little Christmas tree that graced the entrance to the Gift Shop in the Scheriber building during the holidays has been removed. We are hoping to see a large community tree in the depot square when another Xmas rolls around and perhaps the piece of ground mentioned will be beautified with flowers and shrubs when summer comes.

TINLEY PARK M. E. CHURCH
Mr. Fields is back from Oklahoma and will preach at the Methodist church next Sunday morning on "Skin Game." He promises not to skin anybody however. He also hopes that everybody in town will keep that New Years resolution and come to church.

All of those who expect to be in attendance at the supper on Jan. 14 be sure to let Mr. Fields know Sunday.

Every Tuesday at 1:30 p. m., a public buncle party will be held in the Tinley Park Gift Shop. Excellent prizes and refreshments at 50 cents a score card.

The following won prizes at the Tinley Park Gift Shop the past week: Mrs. Nina Roesser, bisque doll; Mrs. J. Klepper, set of Japanese dishes.

Mrs. L. Truesdell and Mrs. C. Hill of Chicago spent one day last week visiting Mrs. Combs at the Gift Shop.

Since the holidays are over the local stores will close every night with the exception of Saturday, which will be the only open night in the week.

The New Year dance held by Lorenz and Rein last Friday night, was well attended.

Mrs. J. Klepper entertained the Larkin Club on Tuesday.

The Tinley Park Real Estate Improvement Association reports a very successful year in 1926 and are engaged in making plans for several new buildings they expect to build this summer.

Mrs. Wallace B. Combs entertained a few friends at buncle in the Gift Shop Dec. 30th.

Mrs. Firchau, the young bride won the first prize and Mrs. B. Campbell, the consolation.

Mrs. J. Keleher and Mrs. Wm. Clements spent Tuesday visiting in Winnetka.

Grandma Hick celebrated her birthday, Thursday, January 6th.

Mrs. J. C. Andres, wife of our mayor underwent an operation in a Chicago hospital this week. We wish for a speedy recovery.

In Memoriam

RICK—William Rick, Sr., in memory of my beloved husband who entered into rest a year ago. Happy were the years we spent together.

Lonely is our home to-day;
For the one we loved so dearly,
Has forever passed away.
